

Interest Charged on Legal Costs

Questions and Answers

Why am I getting a letter?

We are writing to you because we charged you interest on legal costs and/or third party costs associated with the legal process that formed part of your mortgage balance. We are giving you a payment for the interest we charged on these costs.

Who does this affect?

This affects some customers who were charged interest on legal costs and/or third party costs associated with the legal process when we were trying to recover money owed on their mortgage account.

What are these costs?

Legal costs are expenses incurred by us when we start any legal action in order to recover money owed on a mortgage account. We only do this when we have tried all other options available to us. Legal costs also include third party costs that were incurred because your mortgage account was in the legal process, such as solicitor fees.

Why were legal and/or third party costs applied to my account?

We applied these costs to your mortgage account as we incurred costs and expenses when we were trying to recover money owed on your mortgage account. In line with the terms and conditions of your mortgage all such costs and expenses are payable by you. We only start legal proceedings to recover money owed on your mortgage account when we have tried all other options available to us.

Why are you giving me back the interest charged on the legal and/or third party costs associated with the legal process?

While the terms and conditions relating to your mortgage account allow us to charge you interest on unpaid legal and/or third party costs, we have decided to change this practice and stop charging you interest on these costs and to repay interest we have already charged on these costs.

Why are you giving me back the interest on these legal and/or third party costs until 31 December 2020?

We have calculated forward the amount of interest you would pay on these costs from now until 31 December 2020, by which time interest will no longer be charged on these costs.

How will I see the payment on my account?

The payment will appear on your annual statement as 'Capital Adjustment'.
